Capítulo I

The field of digital preservation systems has been defined by the Open Archival Information System (OAIS) standard ISO 14721:2003, which provides a high-level reference model. This model has been very useful. (NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY, 2000, p. 10-20) It identifies the participants, describes their roles and responsibilities, and classifies the types of information they exchange. However, because it is only a high-level reference model, almost any system capable of storing and retrieving data can make a plausible case that it satisfies the OAIS conformance requirements.

Work is under way to elaborate the OAIS reference model with sufficient detail to allow systems to be certified by an ISO 9000-like process (BUDD, 1988a) Cit. por TRIFT, p. 25), and to allow systems to inter-operate on the basis of common specifications for ingesting and disseminating information. In the same way that ISO 14721 was developed top-down, these efforts are also top-dowr. (BUDD, 1988b)
